systems and sophisticated IT networks. Ironically, when it comes to the interconnectedness of Canada's more than 40,000 different kinds of points of care, our health system is remarkably disconnected. What does it mean to you? If you end up in a hospital ER, the doctors and nurses may have no choice but to apply emergency treatment without knowing your health history. When you visit a pharmacist, he likely isn't aware of all the medications you are taking. And if you are treated at a clinic, your GP won't be instantly advised. The reality is, modern electronic record systems routinely used by banks, retailers - even pizza vendors - provide organizations like these with a degree of customer insight that our health care professionals have until recently only dreamed of.
